NUMB. 3061

FRIDAY DECEMBER 23, 1743.

To the AUTHOR, &c.

SIR,

In this Age of Paper War, this Century of Calumny and Detraction, when Truth and Falshood bear so near a Similitude in the various Writings of anonymous Authors, it was hard for one of my Profession, unused to the Stile of Controversy, to enter into one; however, from a strong Attachment to Truth, and an honest Zeal for the Character of my Commander, most wickedly attacked by a nameless Libeller, I lately published a Pamphlet, intitled, The Spanish Hireling Detected; and conscious of the Truths it contained, I sign'd my Name to it. This fair Proceeding, I thought, might justly entitle me to the Name of any Person, who would controvert the Facts therein laid down; and with me (I believe I am not singular) 'tis a Maxim, to give little Credit to the Man who is either shamed, or afraid, to acknowledge what he publishes to the World. From this Rule then, and what I have declared in my Preface to that Pamphlet, I don't think myself in the least obliged to take any Notice of what has been said against it. But as I am personally attack'd, as I am accused of writing in a virulent Stile of Scurrility, foul Language, and Detraction; of having deamed good and worthy Characters; I think it necessary to clear myself from the Imputation. But should it happen, that 'tis only the galled Horse winces, and that the several distinguishing Epithets, which I have added to certain Names and Things, are quite proper; such Property, I hope, will not be deemed Defamation. Have I, then, called some of the Assembly-Men of Carolina Ridiculous? Their idle Proposals (which are not denied to have been made to General Oglethorpe) shew them to be so.

Is one of them suggested to descend from a Buccaneer? His great Anxiety about Plunder makes it quite natural to think so?

Had not the Pirates, who formerly lived in Carolina, Courage? If the present Race inherit it, why did they not show it at St. Augustine? Why did they not come to our Assistance in the late Invasion of Georgia, when they had a Month's Notice prior to it? The Lieutenant-Governor appointed to himself several Aid-du-Camps; made Mr. Vanderdussen, a Dutchman, General and Commander in Chief; two other of the Inhabitants, Generals; and an Attorney, Major-General; and Colonels and Captains are every where to be met with in Carolina. Where was then the Lieutenant-Governor, with his long Train of Aid-du-Camps? Where was then their High and Mighty Captain-General and Commander in Chief of their Forces by Sea and Land, &c. &c. &c. Vanderdussen? Where were their Lieutenant, Major, and Brigadier-Generals; their numerous Colonels and innumerable Captains? Why did they abandon their Dwellings and Plantations when the Spaniards were 200 Miles from them? And why, when the few who came in Capt. Thomson's Vessel, after the Enemy were beaten off, and the General proposed going in pursuit of the Gallies (which he had Intelligence lay in St. John's River) why, I say, did they to a Man beg to be sent Home again? And why did the greatest Part of them, nay their Volunteer-Leaders, on hearing there was a Likelihood of Action, return to Carolina? Surely 'tis not Defamation to say such Men like sleeping in whole Skins.

Have I charged their Volunteers with sneaking away from St. Augustine? 'Tis Truth, I affirm they did so, great Part of them, before the Investment of the Place; and the Remainder, with their Captain, soon after. Nay, so very notorious was this Fact in the Camp, that I remember it was proposed by Vanderdussen, before this great Volunteer-Captain's Face, to hang him for an Example to his Countrymen; but Mr. Vanderdussen permitted him to go on Board, and, least Orders might come from other Quarters to prevent him, he sailed peaceably off the next Day. 'Tis certainly great-Scurrility to say such a Man had rather eat than fight.

Have I affirmed, that Lieutenant-Governor Bull's Son deserted, when Captain of the Guard? I do so still; 'tis Fact, and I appeal to all then present. Does not Mr. Vanderdussen know it? Will he deny it?

Did not Lieut. Izard shamefully throw up his Commission? Did not several desire to do the same as a Family, making such pitiful Excuses as I have stated in that Pamphlet? Were there, in the whole Carolina Regiment, much more than 200 fit for Arms? Were not even those all raw, mutinous, and undisciplin'd? Did not they continually murmur and complain at the least Fatigue, or March towards the Enemy? And did not they, in their Retreat, make a most disorderly and hasty one, of near 30 Miles, in about 12 Hours? Did not Mr. Vanderdussen, their Colonel (who has since so much valued himself on the Gallantry of his Retreat) lead the Van in it? Did he not keep there all Night, tho' told his Rear was several Miles behind him? Did he see that Rear, till they arrived at St. John's the next Day? And, to complete the Piece, did not Captain Michael desert, with his whole Company, carrying off with him the Provision of the Regiment? Are not these Things so? Yea, they are.

And now I must refer it to any impartial Reader of the Spanish Hireling, if there is any Scurrility in it, or whether the Rod has not been spared. I cannot recollect one fly Insinuation in the Pamphlet. I have stated plain Facts, named the Men whose Behaviour was notoriously bad, and signed my Name to it, that they might know their Accuser. How fair this Method is to that of the nameless Insinuator I answer'd (who, wrapp'd up in his own mean Obscurity, attempts to sacrifice Characters, and stabs in the Dark) let the World judge.

Had I, instead of justifying, attempted to vilify my Commander; had I joined with the Tribe of the Ungrateful and the Liars, perhaps I might, like a certain Person, black with the deepest Stains of Ingratitude, have merited, from this Libeller, the Character of a good and worthy Officer.

As the Author of the aforesaid Pamphlet, which has accused me of Calumny and Detraction, hath also, under the Pretence of answering the Spanish Hireling, raised several new, scandalous Reflections, and attempted to support them by Affidavits; and one particularly, said to be sworn by Mr. Vanderdussen, which was, by the Attestation of several Gentlemen, in the Champion of the 5th of July last, falsified. As this was some Time before the Publication of that Affidavit in the said nameless Author's Pamphlet, I refer to the Judgment of every Reader, what Credit such a Writer should have, who ventures to give such an Affidavit as Evidence; and would likewise have him know, that the Reason why Mr. Vanderdussen's was the only Affidavit taken Notice of, is, that He, out of the whole Possess of Journalists and Letter- Writers, is now present, and is hereby called upon, to swear to the same Facts before a Court of Record in England, which he is suppos'd to have done in Carolina.

GEO. CADOGAN.

Yesterday arrived a Mail from Flanders.

Constantinople, November 21.

WE receive every Day Letters full of ill News from the Frontiers. Kouli Kan appeared before the City of Karkut with a numerous Army, in hopes of taking it by Surprise; in which, however, he miscarried, and his Troops were repulsed with a great Slaughter. Soon after, he returned with a considerable Train of Artillery, besieged the Place in Force, carried it by Assault, and put all the Inhabitants, as well as all the Garrison, to the Sword. Upon the first Advice of the Siege, a Body of our Troops, consisting of 50,000 Men, marched in order to relieve it; but, by the Address of the Persian Monarch, they were drawn into an Ambuscade, and defeated. The News of this, and of the Severity exercised at Kerkut, frightened the City of Mousoul into a Surrender. Kouli Kan has since begun his March towards Aleppo; not only with a View to cut off Provisions from our Troops, but with Intention also to deprive the City of Babylon of all hopes of Relief.

Hamburg, December 18. A Report having been spread in this Country, that the King of Prussia was assembling an Army in Silesia, with an Intent to make a Diversion in favour of his Imperial Majesty; and several Copies of a Manifesto, supposed to be signed by Field-Marshal Count Schwerin, containing the pretended Motives to this War against the Queen of Hungary, having been spread about, M. Destimon, his Prussian Majesty's Minister to the States of the Lower Saxony, has caused an Article to be inserted in the Gazette of this City, whereby he declares those Reports to be altogether void of Foundation, and the pretended Manifesto an impudent Forgery, contrived by evil-minded People to serve their wicked Purposes; his Prussian Majesty having no Difference with the Queen of Hungary; but being, on the contrary, firmly resolved to live in the strictest Friendship, and best Intelligence possible, with that Princess.

Vienna, December 14. We not only talk no more of the Affairs of the Marquis de Botta, which is now absolutely set in its true Light; but it is even said, that a Quadruple Alliance between her Imperial Majesty of Russia, the Crowns of Sweden and Denmark, and the Queen our Sovereign, is on the Carpet, and will speedily be concluded; and it is also said, that her Majesty last named, has made a very considerable Present to M. Lazinski, Russian Minister at this Court, for his Diligence and Secrecy in this Negotiation. The Reader is desired to take Notice, that this is transcribed from the Brussels Gazette.
